OBJECTIVES

The project School still plays aims to encourage and thinning the dynamics of contact between the school system and youngsters (11/18 years old), experimenting territorial solutions in order to reduce the phenomenon of school drop-outs, through the creation of "nitro" with a 3D dimension.

In general, the project aims to:

- contribute to the redefinition of school curricula and new didactic approach and guidance services at all educational levels, based on emotional competences and life skills;
- experiment training paths addressed to school teachers;
- develop models for preventing and fighting early school leaving, to be replicated and exploited, focusing on inclusion through the strengthening of local partnership networks in education and training;
- establish a network of "process facilitators," available to the institutions for consultation, proposal, design, monitoring and evaluation of curricula and training programs in relation to stakeholders' needs and wishes (young people, teachers, employers, local authorities, universities , etc.).
- ensure the continual adaptation of curricula to the work processes for maintaining and developing the employability levels.

WHAT CAN SSP DO FOR YOU?

ARE YOU A STUDENT?

Don't you feel comfortable at school and you prefer not to attend it? Do you think that it is not important to have contact with your teachers or your parents?

SSP can help you!

If you believe the only solution is to leave school, you should know that there is another way: the SSP project proposes solutions and can help you reconnect with school and your family!

How can you help SSP?

- Participate filling in the questionnaire that we are going to submit in your school
- Participate to the training courses that will valorise life skills you never suspected to have
- Spread the word around you about the project

ARE YOU A TEACHER OR A SCHOOL ADMINISTRATOR?

Are you interested in increasing the motivation in your students and their participation? Don't you know how to handle the early leaving of your students?

SSP can help you!

You could know methodologies and collaborative tools to prevent this phenomenon and help your students and share ideas with your colleagues in EU!

How can you help SSP?

- Involve in training courses that focus on the teaching of emotions, experimenting methods and tools for its implementation
- Join the on-line community platform and share best practices with other actors involved in education. You can log-in directly on the SSP website www.schoolstillplays.eu
